Feb 7 The Queen Victoria Bridge over the Buckie Burn which had not been without problems during its construction not least that as planned it was 3 foot too low in comparison with the street level on either side, collapsed early on the morning of Thursday February 1, 1901. Each of the three arches snapped cleanly away from the granite pilasters . It was suggested that the green masonry simply could not contend with the hurricane winds snow and sleet which occurred during much of Wednesday evening and into Thursday morning. The burn was banked up by a twenty foot heap of stones, lime, sand, bricks and scaffolding. The three foot of material had been added to take the bridge up more of less level but there still required around 200 cart loads to be added.

In a resume of the year the B.A. said that 1901 had been a busy one in the shipbuilding trade. All the boats being built were of the carvel zulu type. W.R.McIntosh, who had two yards one at Portessie and another at Ianstown, launched 8 boats all together with Alexander Cormack at Gordonsburgh launching four and George Thomson three.

Over the past 12 to 15 years it was said the size of the boats had almost doubled in size being now on average 80 feet overall in length, with a beam of twenty feet. The Queen Victoria Bridge which had fallen down in February had been rebuilt, unfortunately the firm which had the misfortune to see their work collapse went to the wall.
